Heatsheet Deliveries by Adventurous UUs!

The emergency Heatsheets were distributed on January 16th, in anticipation of freezing weather overnight and the rest of this week. When the project was formalized, we set our goal. We wanted to reach the homeless in remote areas of Austin, those who would not come in for assistance and those who could not find space in full shelters.

Phillip Hemphill has worked with Mobile Loaves and Fishes for the past several years. He has also assisted with Freeze Nights at our church. Several times in January, Phillip drove to some of the sites where the homeless were reported to be. He then planned the trip and drew maps to our designations. We met at church and discussed the plan. Then we were ready for the excursion. Kitty Traylor stopped by with 20 sweatshirts and Roseanne Graham brought several coats for us to distribute. For the Heatsheets to work, the wearer needs to wrap the sheet over a coat or other clothing. Russell Eskew came along so we had the second man with us. Ruth Marie joined Roseanne Graham and Mary Ann Stafford as the women who would approach the female homeless. Sometimes, the homeless women are leery of men because of the abuse they typically suffer while they live on the streets.

Phillip drove us to several sites around town. One stop was decided against because Phillip estimated that there might be 30 to 40 homeless people living in that area in the woods. We did not want to be mobbed especially since we only had 30 Heatsheets. At one stop, at an overpass on 183, Russell braved three lanes of traffic and sprinted over to deliver a Heatsheet to a man panhandling along the thoroughfare. We were planning to wait in Phil's truck at a red light for Russell to return. Alas, the light turned green and we were forced to make a turn around in the heavy traffic to pick up Russell. On another stop, Russell, Phillip and Mary Ann threaded themselves across the access road on I-35 to deliver the sheets to two men and one woman who were washing windshields for a fee. We gave them each a Heatsheet and gave the woman a coat that fit her nicely. She taught us the easiest way to cross the busy streets at that corner. On our last stop, we went to the area around the main library. We distributed the rest of the Heatsheets except for four. We gave away most of the sweatshirts and another coat. There were two men who were foraging in the trash for food. Mobile Loaves and Fishes had been in the area at 5:00 PM and the two men had not come into the area until 6:00 PM. We did not have either food or money with us and weren't able to help the men.

It was a mixed experience. The times were ugly in seeing the way of life of these people; they were beautiful when hearing the appreciation spoken and in seeing them hold up sweatshirts to their bodies, realizing that they would fit. The five of us returned to the church feeling a little overwhelmed by the number of people we couldn't help. We felt hungry and knew that we would eat while realizing that some we left behind on the street would not.

Davidson's Lane —

I want to mention some of the costs of losing a full-time staff person for six months (our intern), by sharing some of the ways in which I've used our interns.

When I came here in 2000, church members were responsible for, and were arranging, 18 Sundays a year – I was contracted to be responsible for 34 Sundays, four of which are guest ministers I arrange. This meant about 18 lay-led services each year – about one a month, September – June, and 8 more in the summer. Attendance was lower, sometimes much lower, during these services – and so was the money in the collection plate.

I decided to begin using interns as transitions toward hiring a second minister, by assigning them duties for worship services, which I felt was not appropriate for a church this size to keep pushing off on volunteers. This has also given interns quite a rich experience, with real-world responsibilities. I have had the interns preach at least ten Sundays a year, and arrange the approximately eight summer services, adding some "quality control." This meant that I told the interns some of the standards I wanted us to maintain as much as we could, and had them try to screen and work with applicants for summer services. To some extent, we can't really do this, because unless we keep the intern for twelve months rather than ten, we have too many extra services to fill, and can't be all that picky. Our first intern did stay for 12 months, and preached all but about two of the summer services. Our second intern stayed eleven months, our third stayed ten. When we can hire a second minister, the ministers can assume meaningful responsibility for all 52 Sundays, but we're not there yet – we're the largest church in the UUA with only one minister.

What this reflects is the fact that as our size increases, people simply expect a good quality service on Sunday, no matter who is in the pulpit. Also during the past seven years, we've gone from 12 Split-the-Plate Sundays to 24. Now we split all the non-pledge money, 24 weeks a year, with two dozen non-profit organizations whose values and actions we are proud to support. The more lay services (or poorly-done services by interns) we have, the more the attendance falls, collections fall, affecting both our church's budget and the amount of money our 24 non-profit friends will receive from us. The better we get, the more other people and organizations we want to help – and the more people there are who are impacted by our problems.

As this newsletter goes to print, I'm recommending to the board that they make available most of the unspent money already budgeted for the intern, February through June, so I can try to hire ministers for most of the 13 Sundays yet to be filled. I can try to bring in other ministers, both UU and from other religions, asking them what they would like to say to an audience of Unitarians who wouldn't understand their religious jargon. This could be quite an interesting series of guest speakers! We also need to hire extra office hours to handle some of the other scheduling things for which I've been using interns (partly because I am scheduling-impaired; I've had to hire a bookkeeping firm to pay my bills and balance my checkbook – whatever that means). The unspent money can be put back into the general fund by September 1. This will involve a lot of extra time for me, which I'll have to take out of sermon preparation time. (Some people wonder how much time it takes to prepare a sermon. I've found the same formula that I've always heard from good preachers: about one hour per minute. I spent an average of 25-30 hours a week on the sermon.) So for some of these Sundays, I'd be using old sermons (which most people here have never heard). I suspect the board will either approve this, or come up with an even better way to meet the needs of a large church with high expectations and about a $700,000 budget.

Actually, this whole experience has been very good, in a real-world kind of way, and will help us improve in ways we hadn't even imagined before. That's all good stuff! See you in church!

Sunday Worship Services 9:45 and 11:30

3 February: "The Kingdom of Heaven is Like...."

Davidson Loehr

Some of the finest and most powerful/disturbing parables in history are those attributed to the man Jesus. Almost every one of them is a slap in the face to our customary way of seeing things. When the Jesus Seminar ranked the parables by the likelihood that they were authentic, the one ranked the highest was the parable of the Leaven (Matthew 13:33b and Luke 13:20-b-21). What can honest religion do with this?

10 February: "Equal Pay for Unequal Work?"

Davidson Loehr

Another parable considered to be close to the authentic voice of Jesus is one of the rudest: the parable of the Vineyard Laborers (Matthew 20:1-15). It's one of my favorites – and I don't think it has a thing to do with economics.

17 February: Speaker and Topic to be announced

24 February: A Theological Argument for Abortion

Davidson Loehr

I've thought for a long time that all the preacher-prattle about abortion as an evil thing rests only on very shallow religious reasoning – and that a deeper theological argument can be made for abortion as something that can be the most moral and decent choice available. To make it more interesting, I'm basing this on an argument from one of the most famous (and very best) Papal Encyclicals in Roman Catholic history: the Rerum Novarum of 1891.

Public Affairs Forum: Sundays: 11:30 am Howson Hall

3 February "Eckhardt: There Once Was a Congressman from Texas" Speaker: Gary Keith, Political Science Professor at the University of the Incarnate Word (San Antonio); Previously at UT for five yrs. Gary Keith is a First UU member who has spoken previous Forums about elections and democracy. Dr. Keith recently finished writing a book that is a biography of an important, witty, and eccentric man, Congressman Bob Eckhardt (whose daughter Sarah is a First UU member). Eckhardt grew up in Austin, so there is a lot of Austin history in the book. He then practiced labor law in Houston, fought in the bruising political battles in Texas in the 1950s and 1960s, served in the Texas legislature, and finally went off to Washington, where he was a celebrated Congressman. Eckhardt was also a lifelong political cartoonist. Dr. Keith will speak about the book and the significant contributions that Eckhardt made to public life. Over the years of working on the book, he learned that lots of people have Eckhardt stories. Bring yours!

17 February "The Paradox of Pornography: A Path for Men to Understanding the Problem of Patriarchy"

Speaker: Dr. Robert Jensen, School of Journalism, University of Texas at Austin In U.S. culture, men typically are trained to see feminism as a threat not only to their power and privilege but to their masculinity and sense of self. An expansion of meaningful participation by men in the movement to end violence against women requires a challenge to those fear-based assumptions about feminist analyses of gender and sexuality, and a critical examination of pornography provides such an opportunity. Although pornography use by men is common, men also often feel conflicted about the effects on their emotional lives and relationships. In this program, Robert Jensen will report on 20 years of research on the pornography industry and men's use of pornography. Drawing on hundreds of formal interviews and informal discussions with men, Jensen will explore strategies for reaching men through this issue in ways that can open doors to a larger discussion of sex and violence. The central question to frame the discussion will be: In the past two decades, pornography has become increasingly normalized and mainstream in U.S. culture, while at the same time the content of the material has become more and more overtly cruel and degrading to women. How do we explain this apparent paradox?

24 February "The History of the Save Our Springs Alliance and the Opportunities Going Forward to Save the Edwards Aquifer" Speaker: Bill Bunch, Executive Director, Save Our Springs Alliance. Mr. Bunch will discuss the SOS, and its history relating to the Edwards Aquifer, its springs and contributing streams, the natural and cultural heritage of the Hill Country Region, and its future opportunities to save the aquifer. He will also highlight the extraordinary documentary, "The Unforeseen", a film about the development around Barton Springs.

From the Building Committee:

We Have Selected Our Architect!

The Building Committee is pleased to announce the selection of Hurt Partners Architects to design Phase I of the Master Plan. We were lucky to have a good group from which to make our selection, and we're excited to have Tom Hurt on board. We expect to begin work in early February. Please keep your eyes and ears open to learn of opportunities to have input into the design. We will begin by reviewing the Master Plan and further defining the program (what exact spaces are needed, the size of the spaces, etc.) but we will move rapidly into design.

As a reminder, the Phase I building will be for religious education and will include at least one multi-use room that will take some of the pressure off of Howson Hall. This space was referred to as a Children's Chapel in the Master Plan but it has always been conceived as a space that serves a host of functions. Once the new building is complete the existing RE wing can be used for additional office space and other uses. If you have questions about this process, please talk to any member of the Building Committee: Brian Moore, Tom Martin, Christy Seals, Jeff Hutchens and Don Smith. The expansion and upgrade of the facilities has been a long time coming and is desperately needed. We hope that all members of First UU will get involved and make this dream a reality. No definite plans have been made yet regarding the Capital Campaign that will be required, but you'll be hearing about that in the not-too-distant future as well.

The Three Rs of sustainability:

Reduce, Re-use, Recycle

The beginning—reducing—is sometimes easier than you think. In the 1970s, a survey asked marketing professionals to name the single most successful word ever used in advertising. The overwhelming majority agreed that the word was 'Repeat'. The folks marketing shampoo had figured out that people actually pay attention to directions on bottles. By adding the word 'repeat' to their use instructions, they nearly doubled their sales! Of course, no one's hair was any cleaner. We all use products that we don't need, or use more of products than we need. Look for ways to avoid doing that. The other major way to reduce is to select products that have less packaging. Face it; there are only so many plastic containers that one person can re-use and most of them are going to end up in the landfill because they're not a '1' or a '2'. Also look for products that have minimal packaging and when you shop in a department store, ask them to leave out all the tissue paper they like to stuff in bags. No one cares whether your bags have tissue coming out the top (except for the department store marketing folks—it is, after all, their bag that they're decorating.)

Our Intern Challenges Ahead...

The ending of our intern's service at First UU has presented an excellent opportunity for our church community and this program which has brought five ministerial interns since its inception. Our challenge is to learn from this experience and mold this program into one of which we can be proud, one that stands out as enhancing liberal religion. Though we've had successes, we've also experienced problems

First, the pool of candidates has been unacceptably low. Our five interns have been selected from a total of seven candidates; three interns selected were the only applicants. This has occurred despite First UU's offering among the highest pay in the UUA for interns; in some years the top salary. The good news is, a more proactive approach already has attracted six applicants for the internship that starts in the fall. Second, the recent situation exposed possible problems in the procedures, policies and practices regarding our internship. What changes might help achieve success? Third, we receive confusing and sometimes conflicting information about how our program fits into the overall scheme of the UUA.

As Dr. Davidson Loehr will tell you, this program not only is aimed at preparing interns for the ministry, but also acts as a "gatekeeper" to screen out those who either are unsuited or unprepared for ministry in the UUA. That's a big responsibility, for the minister as well as First UU.

Before our next intern enters the door in the fall, we must take an in-depth look at our program — from start to finish, from top to bottom. A task force is being assembled to do just that. They will be looking at ways to attract a larger, more qualified pool of candidates, at the program itself, at our procedures and infrastructure related to the program, at the program's relationship with the UUA, and more. Our ministerial internship can, and should be, a signature program of First UU. With improvements, it can shine like a beacon across the UUA. — Mark Kilpatrick, President

Split The Plate

On the first and third Sundays of each month we split our offer-tory plate with a non-profit organization that puts our common social-justice values into action.

On February 3: the Ashera Project, a local non-profit fo-cused on youth development and teen pregnancy prevention will be our recipient. Ashera provides comprehensive sexuality edu-cation in order to promote healthy behaviors, and it is ineligible to receive government funding because of this comprehensive approach. Facilitators encourage teens to develop healthy self-esteem, get involved in the community through service projects, and look toward their future by setting future goals. Our 2007 donation has helped implement the fourth year of Ashera pro-grams at Reagan High School.

On February 17 we share with People's Community Clinic This clinic makes high-quality primary care, counseling, and health education accessible and affordable for individuals and families in Austin. People's Community Clinic is dedicated to meeting the needs of low-income patients. The Clinic promotes community involvement in providing health care and stresses health maintenance and disease prevention in all treatment pro-grams. PCC is the focus of a major, congregation-wide Social Action initiative of First UU; many UUs serve as volunteers.

Seniors' Luncheon

Social Action Continues with Info Packs

Help us prepare informational packets for patients at PCC on Wednesday, February 13th from 10 am to 12:30. We have done this several times at church, and many of you have participated. Now we have a chance to send a group to PCC –we'd like to spare them the trouble of preparing and delivering materials to us. Their need is tremendous, so if this works out, we'd like to send a group each month. Please contact Sheri Overton (sherioverton@hotmail.com or 512-847-2685).

Freeze Nite ThankUU

Thank UUs: Usher/Greeter/Lay Leaders

Each of our Freeze Nights has its own dynamics and gives us a new look at the elderly, the infirm and the handicapped. It breaks our hearts to know that these men live on the streets. We have a variety of men who come in. Some are very friendly. Some don't speak and turn away if spoken to. Some are helpful while others steer away from sweeping food particles off the floor or cleaning up. Regardless of their status, we treat each and everyone with respect.

Edward Sledge, Phillip Hemphill, Mary Jane Ford, Bob Porter, John Carey, Camille Hemlock, Rose Ann Reeser, John Payne, Mike Wilkes, Barbara Owens, Dick Fralin, Jesse Fralin, Kitty Traylor, Thomas Bodine, Karen Franks, Renae Pachero, Rick Diker, Julia Gregory, Ruth Marie, Megan Seaholm, Becky Moon, Vince Harrison, Dyanne Cortez, Javier Cortez, Barbara Tuttle, Carrie Evans, Sarah Stevens, Russell Eskew, Sterling Heraty, Robin Fremin, Susy Reid, Roseanne Graham, Bill Freeman, James Freeman, Dave Dunkman, and last but not least, our coordinator, Mary Ann Stafford.

Without the camaraderie of our crew, it would be difficult to confront the task at hand. The inclusive spirit of caring, giving and honoring others is an incredible experience that can't be duplicated. Give thanks to these special people and the others who participate in the Freeze Night program.

January 1st was a different night from others as is usual. The gentlemen were hungry when they arrived. They loved the wild pig stew. They said it tasted like the food they grew up with. Next they ate the meat stew and minestrone. They devoured the black eyed pea soup and the turkey pot pie. And (since I made it) they loved the cabbage and ham hocks and ate it all up. Actually they were so hungry we were afraid that we would run out of food. Our mouths watered as we watched them from the kitchen as Karen Franks passed out the brownies. Some got in line twice to savor the precious chocolate. Those of us in the kitchen got crumbs. We scrounged the refrigerators and freezers for cookies and they ate all of them. We made an urn and a half of coffee. They drank three gallons of milk and two containers of half n half. One pound of butter was spread over their cornbread. They finished off one container of margarine.

Applause for our Lay Leaders: Nell Newton, Sheila Gladstone, and Cindy Raab. Next, Cheers for the Ushers and Greeters: Don Smith, Joe Linsalata, Linda Taylor, Doug Ginn, Geri Mosher, Barb Denny, Sandra Ries, Betty Bowie, Jim Bowie, Sharon Finley, Tom Priem, Beth Priem, Kitty Traylor, Luther Elmore, David Leibson, Theron Kook-Kasssens, Juanita Salinas, John Carey, Courtney King, and Joyce Wilson.

Reflections of the Director of Religious Education

February in RE is a very busy creative time. Surprise Pals will begin on February 27. There will be a sign up table in the gallery and the application form is printed in this newsletter. Participants can apply by email or sign up at church. For those of you unfamiliar with this intergenerational activity, please see the information in this newsletter.

RE is also hosting our annual "Make Your Own Valentine Party" in Howson Hall on Feb. 10. We need volunteers to help the kids and the congregants in making their valentines, so if you can help, please contact me. Also, please remember to bring a desert to share for the Valentine Making Party.

Field-testing of the new UUA children's curricula started on January 13. So far, it seems the kids seem very enthusiastic about the curriculum. Our Spring 2008 Children's RE flyer is available outside the classrooms and at the visitors' table each Sunday. There is a comprehensive description of each curriculum in the flyer.

See you in church, Lara Douglass

Surprise Pals will run from February 24 to April 6.

Each adult applicant is matched with a child applicant, and they correspond for six weeks through our own Surprise Pal Mailbox System, located in Howson Hall. Small gifts are allowed, but only under $1 (stickers, candy, etc).

Pals meet each other at the Surprise Pals Party on April 6. Child pals from 1st-5th grade are invited to participate. Parent/guardians must sign the application on behalf of their child and will be informed of the identity of their child's surprise pal in advance. ALL pals must make a firm commitment to correspond weekly – everyone loves to get mail!! Use the application below, email lara@austinuu.org for an application, or pick one up in the Gallery from Jan. 27th to Feb. 17th.

Valentine Making Party! Feb. 10th

Please join the Religious Education Department in a celebration of Valentine's Day between services on Sunday, February 11 in Howson Hall. We will have all the supplies you need to make Valentines for your friends and family.
